

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Mr. J. C. Spencer reported, that pursuant to the order of the House, Mr. Cargill and himself had waited on the Senate and informed them that this House had met and was ready to proceed to business.

A message from the Governor, delivered by his private secretary, was received, and read in the words following, to wit :

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE, AND OF THE ASSEMBLY :

I should do injustice to my feelings, if I were to refrain from expressing, on this occasion, my deep sense of the high confidence reposed in me by the people of this State, at the recent election. I shall endeavor to make a suitable return, by devoting myself diligently to the discharge of the duties of the department entrusted to my care, regardless of every consideration but the public good. Conscious of my imperfections, it is no small satisfaction to me, to know, that the executive power under our government is so wisely circumscribed, that every measure emanating from it, affecting the policy of our laws, or the substantial interests of the people, must pass the supervision of your body, where the errors of a single judgment will receive due correction from the delegated wisdom of the State.

As a member of the Union, this State participates largely in its glory, and shares in its prosperity ; and at no period since the revolution have we had greater reason to rejoice in the wisdom of its councils, or to feel a just pride at its elevated character as one of the family of nations. The individual at its head, renowned for his great services and devotedness to his country in another capacity, has, in his civil station, shewn an intimate knowledge of the cardinal interests of the nation, a familiarity with his duties, and an intrepidity in the discharge of them, which cannot commend him more to our affections or respect, but which demand for him the admiration of the present age, and will secure to him the lasting gratitude of his country. The two leading principles of his administration, which lie at the foundation of our future prosperity as a nation, have been asserted by him in the discharge of his duties, in a manner which shews that he loves his country more than he fears the loss of power, or the efforts of disappointed cupidity and ambition. I allude to the payment of the national debt, and the restraining of the power of congress within the limits plainly marked out by the compact between the states. His veto upon the Maysville road bill, the first of a series of measures for internal improvement projected for the sanction of congress and estimated to cost more than ninety-six millions of dollars, will remain upon record a durable monument of his correct views of public policy and constitutional rights, as well as of his moral courage and uncompromising patriotism.

Our foreign relations are amicable, and we have no reason to apprehend a speedy rupture with any nation.

Enjoying, as we do, a high degree of happiness under our free institutions, we cannot be insensible to the influence of our example upon the people of other countries, nor unmoved by their efforts to assimilate their governments to our own. The late Spanish colonies at the south, having achieved their independence, are yet violently convulsed by efforts to organize their governments upon principles, and with modifications, which will ensure for them permanent tranquillity. The recent revolutionary movements in France afford a bright hope that this nation, distinguished for heroism and science, vividly associated with the recollections of our early struggle for independence, and endeared to us by so many ties, has at last found relief from an arbitrary abridgment of individual rights, in the full establishment of the authority of the people. The people under other European sovereignties seem stirred by bordering commotions; and we have reason to believe, that in the progress of light and knowledge, we, now the youngest of nations, will, at no distant period, be hailed as the elder brother of legitimate governments. It becomes us, for our own good as well as for the cause of struggling humanity, to manifest to the world, that a republican government, firmly based upon the will of a well instructed and virtuous people, is the most just and enduring, and exempt from those disturbing and destroying factions, which tend to anarchy and terminate in despotism.

In regard to our internal concerns, your labors will be directed towards providing for the due administration of justice; the improvement of the moral and intellectual condition of the people; and the development and application of the physical resources of the State.

We can look with satisfaction upon what has already been accomplished in relation to these objects. Our municipal laws have been relieved from much which belonged to a less enlightened age; the severity of our criminal code has been materially mitigated; large provision has been made for public education; and our canals, dispensing their benefits through various channels, are evidence that an enlightened spirit of public improvement has guided our counsels. There is yet, however, much to do; and all these subjects will require your ceaseless exertions.

To what extent the industry of the country may be facilitated by the expenditure of money on works of public utility, depends essentially upon the condition of the treasury, and our means for producing revenue. Under no form of government can a people be happy and prosperous, if a careless and prodigal use of the treasures and credit of the State is indulged.

In my last annual message, I presented a review of the public funds from the year 1826, and showed a diminution of the capital of the general fund during that period, from two millions six hundred and thirty-seven thousand nine hundred and thirty-six dollars, to one million three hundred and forty-four thousand two hundred and sixty-eight dollars. That capital has sustained a farther reduction during the past year, so that it now remains at..... $1,312,466.

That amount made up of the following items, viz:

Bank stock,.....	$126,965 00
Bonds and mortgages, for lands sold,	792,568 47
Mortgages for loans to individuals,	369,771 34
“ “ debts due the state,	23,161 19

$1,312,466 00

The reduction of the capital during the last year has been by means of the sale of the Mohawk bank stock, and by receipts of the principal monies upon bonds and mortgages.

The estimated receipts from the general fund for the ensuing year, are of

Revenue,.....	$78,500 00
Capital,	35,000 00

Whole receipts,.. $113,500 00

The estimated ordinary expenses chargeable upon this fund for the present year, are three hundred two thousand two hundred dollars, shewing a deficiency in the receipts to meet the ordinary expenses of one hundred eighty-eight thousand seven hundred dollars. Included in this estimate of expenses, are the deficiencies of the income of the Oswego, Cayuga and Seneca canals, which are by law made chargeable upon the general fund.

It is necessary for a true understanding of the financial condition of the state to know, that the actual annual expenditures of the government, always far exceed the estimates, owing to contingent appropriations, which are not susceptible of calculation. Thus the estimate of expenses for the last year was two hundred and sixty-four thousand dollars, whereas the actual expenditures, including legislative appropriations, have amounted to the sum of three hundred forty-nine thousand one hundred thirteen dollars. For the purpose of more precise information, I have caused an average to be made, both of the estimated expenses, and the actual expenditures, chargeable upon the general fund from the year 1825, to 1829, both inclusive, and find the result to be, that the average estimated expenses for each of these years is two hundred and eighty-two thousand five hundred and twenty dollars, while the actual average payments from the treasury, is three hundred and seventy-six thousand seven hundred and forty-seven dollars; a sum, greater in each year, than the estimate, by ninety-four thousand two hundred and forty-seven dollars. This difference is made principally by the annual legislative appropriations.

The resources of the treasury have been lessened, by the annual consumption of principal of the general fund, the appropriations of the public lands, and other funds to common schools, literature, and canals, and by the withdrawal of the state tax, and the diverting of other sources of revenue.

Thus in 1816, a state tax of two mills upon a dollar was imposed; in 1819, it was reduced to one mill; in 1825, it was farther reduced to half a mill; and in 1827, it ceased by its own limitation. Since the last period no tax has been levied, although the treasury has been aided in its operations by the receipts of arrears of taxes. So also in 1817, the duties on salt, and sales at auction, were diverted from the general fund, and added to the revenues of the canal fund.

By these means the amount of the general fund has become so far reduced, that it is able no longer, either by its revenue or capital, to meet the annual demands for current expenses.

No government can be administered without money, and the means of defraying its expenses, must in some shape be furnished by those for whose benefit it is administered. It therefore becomes necessary to consider from what sources our exhausted treasury can be replenished. This involves an inquiry into the means placed at the disposal of the Legislature for that purpose. These means are taxation, or loans on the credit of the government. If money is borrowed, the interest must be paid, and eventually the capital. If in addition to the current annual disbursements, the money to pay the interest on previous loans must also be borrowed, it is obvious that with compound interest there will be a rapid accumulation of debt, and the public creditor will ultimately require some further security for his loans, than the credit of the state. Such measures would result in impaired public credit; taxation could not be long delayed; and it is to be feared, that when it becomes necessary to levy upon the people the amount of the current expenses, together with the interest accruing upon debts incurred for the expenses of preceding years, swelled by compound interest, the taxation will be found burdensome and may become perpetual.

There is no mystery in financial operations, save what ingenious men have found necessary to throw around them, to conceal their measures from the public knowledge. What would be said of a farmer who should thus manage his private concerns, and trust to borrowing on the credit of his farm, for the annual expenses of his living, instead of deriving support from it by his earnings?

I should be wanting in duty, if I should forbear to pursue this interesting subject still farther, for I deem it of vital importance. We are still a young nation, and have experienced nothing but increasing prosperity, and having now arrived at a point where our treasury must be permanently supplied, or a hazardous experiment upon our credit made, it is our own fault if we do not choose that alternative which we know to be safe, and to which common prudence directly points.

As we have little to appeal to, in our own experience, we should not shut our eyes to the light reflected by the history of other nations. An able English historian, in noticing a temporary debt, created in the reign of Henry the sixth, makes the following remarks: "The first instance of a debt contracted upon parliamentary security, occurs in this reign. The commencement of this practice deserves to be noted; a practice the more likely to become pernicious, the more a nation advances in opulence and credit. The ruinous effects of it are now become too apparent, and threaten the very existence of the nation."

Shortly before the commencement of the last century, when William the third came to the throne, and found it necessary, in order to defend his continental possessions and to restrain the ambition of France, to have more money than could be raised by the ordinary means of revenue, a resort was first had to temporary loans, pledging the annual income to repay them. As this necessity for money continued from year to year, the debt was left unpaid, and the revenues were appropriated to pay the interest of it; and it then occurred to his ingenious financiers that a national debt was a national blessing. Thus within eight years after he ascended the throne, a public debt had accumulated, equal in amount to one hundred millions of dollars. To pay the interest of that debt, and to defray the current expenses of the government, independently of indirect taxation by means of customs, direct taxes were imposed upon the people in every possible shape. They were imposed upon their persons, upon the value of their real and personal property, upon their income, upon their stock in trade, upon births and burials, upon beer, cider, perry, and all the productions of industry, commercial, manufacturing and agricultural. These taxes have been continued, and additional ones imposed upon every new object, created by the trade or industry of the nation, as it was developed, until the British empire, with a population of twenty-two millions of persons, is burthened with a debt amounting to about three thousand five hundred millions of dollars.

It is an extraordinary fact, and shows the evils which a mal-administration may bring upon a community, that the period of time, which enlarged the constitutional privileges of the English people, gave birth to legislative measures, which drew a new line of distinction between the people, and divided them into public creditors and laborers. All the wealth of the nation has been grasped by the comparatively few holders of government stock, and the privilege to support them, by the earnings of their labor, is nearly all that has been left to the many.

When we look at our means of raising revenue, it will be perceived that a state debt is a mortgage upon the persons, the property and the industry of our citizens, and the public creditor will soon call for a contribution from those sources. With our present laws, which secure to every man the enjoyment of the profits of his industry, talents and ingenuity, we can look without concern or envy, upon the greatest amount of wealth which any individual has accumulated by industry and economy. He has a right to enjoy it, and it will be soon distributed by his successors. But there is great danger in creating a mass of wealth, in the hands of individuals, which suffers no diminution, but accumulates from generation to generation, sustained by the industry of the country, and guaranteed by the laws. We have in vain abolished entails, if a more durable species of property is created, levying contributions, not by rents, but by means of taxes.

It is a plausible doctrine, which has been urged with some success, that it is no matter how much money is expended by government, provided it is employed upon suitable enterprises for improving our internal condition; because the money remains among the people, and gives them employment.

This is indeed true, when the money is disbursed from a full treasury. But when the money expended, is borrowed of individuals, on legislative security, and interest is to be paid for its use, to be collected by taxation, upon the annual products of the labor of the people; the money remains among us; the aggregate wealth of the country may be increased; but it is unequally divided: an undue proportion goes into the hands of the few who monopolize the stock, while the remainder of the people are impoverished by the operation.

I have entered into much detail upon this important subject, from a deep conviction, that it is too intimately connected with the public welfare to be lightly passed over, and that the time has now arrived, when it becomes a duty of the people to understand and reflect upon this matter.

I have been placed at the head of the government at a period when it must determine upon the policy to be pursued, in a new and untried state of things. Hitherto the state has been rich in lands and public funds, and aided by taxes, which have ceased, it has been able to meet the payment of temporary loans, the revolutionary claims, and the annual expense of administering the government. This public property is now nearly exhausted, not by the ordinary expenses, but by contributions to public works, and as the basis of special funds.

Internal improvements, by means of canals and rail-roads, have become fixed objects of legislative care, and are among the most interesting subjects which will claim your attention. Their influence in diversifying the pursuits of labor, and equalizing the value of its products, in adding to individual and aggregate wealth, stimulating enterprise, and binding society together in ties of amity and interest, is not only acknowledged in theory, but has been practically demonstrated by our experience. These considerations will induce you to examine with industry and lively solicitude, into the means within your control for their further prosecution.

Our country is peculiarly well adapted to the construction of canals and rail-roads, and affords in all directions, from its soil, its forests and its mines, those ponderous productions, which owe most of their value in market to the cheapness of transportation. Each of these modes of communication has its peculiar merit, and is yet susceptible of much improvement. It remains to be seen what elevations of surface may be overcome by stationary power, as part of the line of a canal, an improvement deserving more attention from those conversant with such subjects, than it seems to have received.

Experiments made in England, during the past year, with locomotive engines, upon a rail-road between Liverpool and Manchester, have produced results more favorable than were anticipated. Loaded carriages now pass regularly between those cities, at the rate of eighteen miles an hour. Indeed light carriages have been moved with a rapidity which almost exceeds belief. An enterprising company is now constructing a rail-road between this city and Schenectady, which, as a specimen of such works, and as affording means to judge of their usefulness and cost, will be of great public advantage. It will probably be finished during the present year.

While canals, peculiarly adapted to the transportation of bulky articles, may be made in suitable situations, rail-roads, on account of their fitness for rapid transmission, to operate at seasons when canals are useless, and perhaps to overcome elevations insurmountable by them, will no doubt, in future times, be extensively distributed throughout the state. There are few obstacles in any part of the state, which may not be overcome by one or the other of these improvements.

An enlightened popular government cannot fail to discover the advantages of such works, and is well fitted to prosecute them judiciously. As the people contribute the means for their construction, they will not fail to discover the proper period for commencing them, and the extent to which they should be carried. The successful experiment which has already been made, while it has shed glory upon the state, affords a stimulus for the prosecution of similar enterprise; and it is not surprising, that some parts of the state, supposed to be peculiarly adapted by nature to receive these helps from art, should exhibit an impatience for their immediate commencement. But any disposition that may be manifested to enter prematurely upon the prosecution of these works, will be restrained by the cooler judgment of those parts of the state, which are called upon to contribute to the expense, but which participate indirectly only in their advantages.

In determining upon the expediency of beginning any new work, it will be proper to consider its public benefits, its probable returns of revenue, and the means of the state. If the state possesses funds for the object, without imposing any burdens upon the people, it will be sufficient to look at its bearings upon the public prosperity, without reference to revenue. If the state should not be in that condition, then it is necessary, preliminarily to ascertain, with considerable exactness, that it will contribute, in tolls, sufficient to pay for necessary repairs and attendance, the interest of the debt to be created on its account, and, within a reasonable time, the principal. If it will not do this, then your duty requires you to determine whether the people will consent to be taxed to make up the deficiency of its revenue, and if so, to impose such tax, contemporaneously with the act authorising its construction.

Acting under a due sense of the importance of these precautionary considerations, I do not doubt, that your measures will satisfy the reasonable desire of the public to continue the march of internal improvement.

The Erie canal passes through the centre of the state, uniting the tide waters of the Hudson, with lake Erie, and affords the means of an easy interchange of commodities between the different parts of the state, and an opening to our great commercial city, for the trade of the Canadas and the states bordering upon the upper lakes. By means of smaller works, completed and in progress, we have connected its advantages with the navigation of the Ontario, Champlain, Onondaga, Cayuga, Seneca and Crooked lakes, and the western branch of the Susquehannah river. Having thus, since the year 1817, opened communications between all our cities, and nearly all our interior navigable waters, we cannot take to ourselves the reproach that the march of internal improvement has been slow, or harbor the thought that its further progress is to be arrested.

The Erie and Champlain canals were projected with great wisdom, and at their commencement, an appropriation was made for them from the general fund, which has been sufficient, at all times, to pay the interest of the monies borrowed. The credit of the state was thereby so firmly established, that for all the later loans, to more than half the whole amount, capitalists were induced to pay a premium upon five per cent. stock. Those canals have drawn from the funds of the state, to the amount only of the duties upon salt, and sales at auction; and their successful operation promises, that they will speedily pay their debt, provided the constitutional protection of their fund is duly respected. When that period arrives, the revenues from salt and auction duties, and tolls of the Erie and Champlain canals, will be under the exclusive control of the legislature. How far it will then be deemed public justice or good policy to reduce the amount of the tolls, or to continue them for the purpose of extending our works of internal improvement, will depend entirely upon the future representatives of the people.

In reference to the subject of revenue and internal improvements, I submitted to the consideration of the last legislature, the propriety of taking measures to procure a distribution of the surplus revenue of the United States. The same suggestion was made by the President to congress, in his first message, and has been renewed by him in his late communication to that body. I find also that one of my most distinguished predecessors alluded to the same subject in his message in 1827. I esteem it of sufficient importance to renew the suggestion, and press it earnestly upon your consideration. We have the fullest assurance, that the President will steadily adhere to his doctrines regarding the power of congress over roads and canals, so that the payment of the national debt, except the three per cents, will be provided for within three years.

At the adoption of the federal constitution, it was deemed proper to place all the revenues derived from customs, at the disposal of the general government. Inasmuch as that government assumed the payment of the public debt, and was charged with our foreign relations, the protection of commerce, and the military and naval defence of the country, it certainly was a wise and equitable disposition of that great source of revenue: Yet, thereby, the individual states are deprived of those ready means of supplying their wants by indirect taxation, upon which every nation mainly relies; and those states which have no demesnes, or other public funds, are constrained to raise revenue by a direct tax. This latter kind of taxation is, from the nature of it, unequal, and draws more than a due proportion from the farmer. During the last forty years, we have passed through all the vicissitudes to which our government is exposed; and experience has shewn, that without burdening commerce, the means of revenue placed at the disposal of congress, will yield much more than can be required to administer the government in peace, or to recover from extraordinary demands upon the treasury during war. As proof of this, the government has expended, on questionable authority, large sums of money for internal improvements; while it has continued to pay more than ten millions of dollars annually towards reducing the public debt. There is, therefore, abundant reason to believe, that a portion of the revenue from customs may, without inconvenience, be permanently appropriated, and restored to the several states, in such a manner as not to interfere with the necessary paramount control over their collection by the national authorities.

It is, without doubt, the most just and economical mode of collecting taxes. It is done by fewer officers, and without that offensive inquisition into the affairs of individuals, which is an indispensable concomitant of direct internal taxation. By this mode, each individual fixes the amount of tax upon himself, and pays in proportion to his means, by the consumption of those articles of foreign production upon which the duties are levied.

It is, at least, questionable, whether there are not sound objections to a mere distribution of the surplus revenues. Among these may be reckoned the uncertainty of the amount, which changes in the tariff rates may occasion; and the withholding of dividends entirely, in national emergencies, demanding extraordinary expenditures. The contingent nature of the supply might prevent the States from engaging in enterprises of magnitude, or produce embarrassments should they be undertaken. This might be remedied by providing that a fixed sum shall be annually distributed. The amount of that sum might be such as not to interfere with the reduction of the present tariff of duties, should the public interest at any time require it. Population is obviously the true basis for distribution, inasmuch as the money would by that rule return to those who contributed it. Our State contains more than a seventh of the population of the Union, and our proportion of seven millions, would be an annual quota of one million. But if three millions five hundred thousand dollars only should be distributed, our proportion would be the interest at five per cent. of ten millions of dollars, and would support our credit for internal improvements to a large amount. This sum would be an indirect tax of twenty-five cents upon each individual in the state, paid by those who consume foreign productions.

I am aware, that in recommending, as I earnestly do, a cautious policy with regard to public expenditures, I point you to a path that leads rather to useful results, than to personal glory; but all of us must be deeply impressed with the truth, that a democratic government can be sustained only by public virtue. The patriot will discard all selfish considerations, and in the execution of his trusts, will suffer the happiness and prosperity of his country to take entire possession of his heart. It is a paramount duty of all the functionaries of the government, to keep the people advised of every thing which affects their interests; and on all occasions to endeavor to infuse a spirit of public morality. That species of legislation which is the result of an alliance between private interests and the excited feelings of the community, bearing with it the co-operation of the timid, and reaching by indirection a common object, is immoral, dangerous, and may ultimately bring ruin upon the country. Those who have designs either of private interest or ambition, will strive to keep the public eye fixed in another direction, while they march to the accomplishment of their purposes unobserved. I am persuaded, that if we are destined to be ruined by legislation, it will not be by means of the comparatively trivial sums which may be supposed necessary to defray the ordinary expenses; not even by the wasteful expenditure of accumulated treasures; but by the allurements of the glory of splendid undertakings, and the legislative power over public credit.

Of this sum $22,491 have been paid for the balance of expenditures due from this canal the last year, and the balance has been applied towards the deficit of the present year. This sum, being $11,017, deducted from the above balance of $39,870, leaves twenty-eight thousand seven hundred and ninety-three dollars, which was made by law chargeable upon the general fund, and has been in part paid from that source.

There is no one of our public institutions of more importance, or which has better fulfilled public expectation, than that providing for instruction in common schools. The large fund, appropriated to that object, has produced a complete organization throughout the state; and although the system has had to encounter all the obstacles to a new enterprise of such magnitude in its operations and objects, yet it has been well seconded by public zeal and liberality. Its imperfections may receive some correction from legislation, yet more is to be hoped from individual exertions, to carry the design of the legislature into effect within the several districts.

There are nine thousand and sixty-two school districts in this state, and eight thousand six hundred and thirty have made returns according to the statute. One hundred and ninety new districts have been formed during the year, and the number which have made returns has increased three hundred thirty-eight in the same period. There are in the districts from which reports have been received, four hundred ninety-seven thousand five hundred and three children between five and sixteen years of age, and four hundred ninety-nine thousand four hundred twenty-four scholars have been taught during the year in the common schools of the state; the general average of instruction having been about eight months. The returns show an increase of children between five and sixteen, compared with the preceding year, of twenty-four thousand one hundred ninety-four, and an increase of the number instructed, of nineteen thousand three hundred eighty-three scholars.

The public money apportioned among the several school districts during the past year, amounts to two hundred thirty-nine thousand seven hundred and thirteen dollars. Of this sum, one hundred thousand dollars was paid from the state treasury, and the residue was derived from a tax upon the several towns, and from local funds possessed by some of them. In addition to the public money, there has been paid to teachers by the inhabitants of the districts three hundred forty-six thousand eight hundred and seven dollars, making a total of five hundred eighty-six thousand five hundred and twenty dollars, paid for teachers' wages alone, in the common schools of the state.

The want of suitable school books, and uniformity in their use, and of competent teachers, seem to be the evils under which the system continues to labor. For the mere purpose of reading and arithmetic, selections may be made, among the various books extant, of such as are perfectly adapted to the purpose. But I feel confident that, under proper regulations, a vast amount of knowledge in the arts and sciences, connected with agriculture and handicraft, which are simple in their principles, and easily comprehended, might be taught to children during those years which are usually spent at common schools. For this purpose, suitable books should be provided, and such teachers only, as are competent to instruct from them, should be employed. I am happy to perceive that gentlemen, abundantly competent to throw light upon this subject, are moving to consult each other, and to devise remedies for the existing evils.

The public attention seems to be awakened to the subject of education in all the departments of knowledge, from that which simply makes the possessor familiar with his duties as a citizen, up to those which enable him to draw from the arcana of nature her treasures, or to contend in full panoply where honors are to be won for himself and his country, in the lists of literary emulation. While knowledge, by its intimate connexion with the harmonious action and durability of our political institutions, has secured for its advancement, the efforts of individual enterprise, it will undoubtedly receive from you due attention and patronage.

The success which continues to attend the operations of the two medical institutions which have been taken under the patronage of the State, is the highest tribute to the talents and perseverance of the professors who have them in charge. The number of students at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the city of New-York, is at this time about one hundred and seventy. The anatomical class is the largest which has assembled for years, and an increase of pupils in every course of instruction is confidently anticipated. It is matter of regret, that this institution is laboring under pecuniary embarrassments, arising from causes of somewhat remote origin, which threaten, if not removed, materially to affect its future prosperity. The College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Western District, has opened the present season with a class of one hundred and seventy-eight students.

In my last message, I gave a minute account of the structure, discipline, and condition of our state prisons. A brief notice of them only, is now necessary.

The prison at Auburn contains five hundred and fifty cells in its north wing, and had, on the seventh day of December last, six hundred and sixteen convicts. Of the sixty-six surplus convicts, twenty-five are females, and confined in one room; the residue are lodged in large rooms, under great disadvantages, in the south wing. In the exercise of a power conferred upon the Executive by law, I directed, during the month of February last, the sheriffs of the counties of Herkimer, Oneida, Otsego, Chenango and Broome, to convey their convicts in future to the prison at Sing-Sing, instead of Auburn. Since that time, the number at Auburn has declined from about six hundred and fifty to the present number.

The prison at Sing-Sing contains eight hundred cells, and had, on the twenty-fourth day of December last, eight hundred and six prisoners, having increased two hundred and twenty-eight during the last year. Of these, one hundred and fourteen have been received from the city of New-York alone. Finding that the accommodations for prisoners were likely to be insufficient for the probable increase,

I recommended, by special message, at the last session, the immediate construction of two hundred cells at Sing-Sing, and ten thousand dollars were appropriated for that purpose. These cells, from causes not anticipated, have not been built, but I am informed that they are now in progress. It is evident that our prisons must be enlarged without delay. The reports of the officers of the prisons will put you in possession of all the facts necessary to enable you to act on the subject.

The condition of the female convicts is a serious evil ; and I feel it my duty to press earnestly upon your attention the subject of a separate penitentiary for them, constructed with single dormitories, where they will be subjected to the discipline which has been so efficacious in the good government of our prisons, and to some extent in reforming male convicts. The whole number of female convicts now supported by the state at Auburn, and at the penitentiary in the city of New-York, is sixty-three. Humanity, and I believe good economy, require that this subject should be no longer neglected. A separate building in the neighborhood of Sing-Sing might be cheaply erected out of the materials at hand, by the labor of the convicts, and the female convicts might be placed in it, under the government of the officers of that prison.

I am not able to state the amount of the earnings of the convicts at Sing-Sing, nor to compare it with the expenses for their support. But I learn from the agent of the Auburn prison, that he will not find it necessary to apply for any appropriation from the treasury.

The expenditures for that prison, during the year ending on the thirty-first day of October last, including the extra expense of building one hundred feet of workshops, repairs of the north wing which was damaged by fire, and all the necessary repairs in and about the prison, amounted to thirty-six thousand two hundred and twenty-six dollars. The earnings of the convicts during the same time, amounted to forty thousand three hundred and forty-one dollars.

I have pardoned from the state prison during the past year, seventy-six convicts. A great proportion of them are persons to whom my attention was called by the officers of the respective prisons, and who were commended to executive clemency by their youth, or long sentences, particularly those for life, on account of trifling burglaries. I found them enduring punishments incompatible with the mitigated severity of our criminal laws.

Farther reflection and experience confirm me in the opinion that punishment by imprisonment for life, should be rarely inflicted, except where a previous term of imprisonment has failed to produce reform. Punishment loses part of its terrors, if the convict may look with hope to the executive power for a pardon, on the facts alone upon which the judges pronounced the sentence of the law. All reflecting men agree in the opinion, that certainty is more efficacious in producing reform, than severity of punishment.

There have been three convictions for capital crimes during the year, and one execution. I felt it my duty, on examining the testimony, to commute the punishment of one (a female) to three years imprisonment, and the other to imprisonment for life in the state prison.

While I renew the suggestion, that the punishment by death for arson is incompatible with the philanthropy of the age, I am impelled to add, waiving the question in casuistry, whether it is proper in any case to take life, that the punishment of death in all cases of mere technical murder is unreasonably severe. I have adhered to a sense of duty in refusing to stay execution, in every case of clear murder within the existing laws; while I have sometimes felt that the measure of punishment was disproportionately severe for the crime. I think that a portion of your time might be well employed in the inquiry whether the crime of murder can not be so defined, or the punishment for the minor species of it so modified, as to limit the punishment of death to cases of actual premeditated homicide.

The result of inquiries which have been made in Europe confirms the deductions of reason, that the higher crimes are lessened as men become more civilized and enlightened; and that though offences against property may increase, crimes against the person are invariably diminished. It would be productive of much good, if measures should be adopted for taking the statistics of crime within this state. Interesting tables might be formed, which would enable us to institute a comparison with other countries, and to determine how far the commission of crime is influenced by the nature of our government, by the intelligence and wealth diffused among our people, and by our mode and degree of punishments. We should be able also to compare year with year, and have some data for regulating our criminal code, and producing a uniformity in sentences.

If justices of the peace, and other judicial peace officers, should be required by law to return annually to the county clerks' offices, an account of the number of warrants issued, of accused examined, and of supposed culprits committed; and courts of special sessions, the number of persons acquitted and convicted before them; and other courts, the number indicted, acquitted and convicted, together with the nature of the offences and the punishments inflicted, the returns of the several county clerks would enable the Secretary of State to present a full and perfect view of that subject.

I recommend also to your consideration the condition of our county prisons, under the conviction that great evils exist in our arrangements there; and in the hope that you will devise some remedy for the spreading of vice in those common receptacles of the suspected and convicted, the young and the old, the adept and the novice in crime. Those sentenced to punishment should be compelled to perform some useful labor, and the accused should have an opportunity to keep themselves employed.

The House of Refuge in the city of New-York, as a penitentiary which operates at the root, and is instrumental in the prevention of crime, and as having been patronized by the State, is deserving of notice. The building will accommodate two hundred and fifty-two boys, and sixty-eight girls, with separate cells; and has corresponding arrangements for the convenience of its government, the instruction of its inmates, and the care of the sick. There are now in the house one hundred and thirty-seven boys, and forty-four girls, nearly all of whom are in a course of instruction in trades. The funds provided by the government are ample for all the purposes of the institution.

During the last fall, I visited the quarantine establishment at Staten Island, under the management of the health officers for the city of New-York. While there, I sanctioned the erection of permanent buildings for a farm and wash-house, and other necessary works and repairs about the dock. They have all been finished, at an expense of about eight thousand five hundred dollars. The establishment is now complete, every edifice is durable, and the whole presents an appearance of cleanliness and order, which reflects great credit upon the officers who have it in charge.

A larger amount of money has been received at that establishment during the last year, than in any former year. Its receipts have been sufficient to pay all debts, make the necessary buildings and repairs, pay the annuity to the House of Refuge, and enable the commissioners to pay over to the Comptroller a surplus of about three thousand dollars towards a mariners' fund. It is not probable that hereafter the average annual surplus will equal that of the last year; and it will consequently require a long time to accumulate, by these small means, a sufficient capital to yield a revenue large enough to do much good. It is perhaps worthy of consideration, whether it would not be more just towards those from whom this fund is derived, to employ the annual surplus in relieving the wants of sailors during the winter season. They could be provided for at the New-York hospital, or at the establishment at Staten Island.

Our laws relative to imprisonment for debt should be carefully examined, for the purpose of amendment. The notion of imprisonment in the nature of punishment for debt, is repugnant to humanity, and condemned by wisdom. Among the early Romans, the unfortunate debtor and his family became the slaves of his creditor; and the hoary veteran has exhibited the bleeding traces of his master's scourge, mingled with the scars of honorable wounds received while commanding in his country's service. This extreme barbarity was discontinued at an early period; yet the principle of punishment for debt, by depriving the debtor of his liberty, was retained by that nation through its subsequent period of refinement, and has been transmitted to this day through all the enlightened governments of Europe. This trait of barbarism, notwithstanding all our reforms, still retains its place in our statute book.

Imprisonment for debt should be tolerated so far only as it is necessary to enable the creditor to secure the property of his debtor. In respect to debts of large amount, ample provisions, beyond the reach of the smaller debtor, seem to have been made; for it is provided that whenever a person considers himself insolvent, he may, on application to a proper officer, and due notice to his creditors, assign over all his property, and obtain exemption from arrest or imprisonment.

With such ample provision before us for the relief of those oppressed with large debts, the injustice of the provisions of the law in regard to the more helpless class, the extremely poor, is very striking.—Imprisonment appears to be wanton when inflicted upon a person without means to pay, and who depends upon his daily labor for the maintenance of his family. A defendant in execution from a justices' court, must in some cases remain in prison thirty days, in others sixty days, before he is permitted to make oath, that he has no means for the payment of his debt. It is this which fills our gaols. An easy remedy may be prescribed, by permitting a defendant on the trial, when his creditor is present, to show his inability to pay, assign over his property, and thereby exempt himself from imprisonment. This subject I hope will engage your early attention, and while you make ample provision for the security of creditors against frauds, and to punish fraudulent debtors criminally, that you will so modify the laws, as to dispense as far as practicable, with imprisonment for debt.

The returns of the militia show an effective force of about one hundred and ninety thousand men. It is probable, that these returns are somewhat defective, and if complete would exhibit a force of more than two hundred thousand. They are divided into the several corps of horse artillery, cavalry, artillery, riflemen and infantry. A well organized militia has always been esteemed by us, as the proper defence of a free nation, and has been cherished as an important part of the arrangement of our government. A standing army, although an indispensable safeguard of a government founded on assumptions, is always burdensome, and has too frequently been found as formidable to the people composing a nation, as to their enemies abroad. The power of organizing the militia, is vested by the constitution in congress, and the existing laws of that body provide for their enrolment, equipment, discipline and inspection. The laws passed on this subject by the state legislature are subordinate to, and must not contravene, the laws of congress. Some complaint has been made of the burden of compulsory militia service, and you may think it expedient to review the militia law, for the purposes of equalizing the duties and relieving the service from any exactions which are not necessary for the accomplishment of the objects designed.

It is still a striking deficiency in our eleemosynary establishments, that suitable provision has not been made for the care, comfort, and restoration of the insane poor. That most destitute class of human beings, are unconscious of their own wants, and can make their appeal to our sympathies through the eye only, an organ conversant with external signs, but incapable of penetrating to the agony of the soul. Hence many of them roam neglected, and are even shunned as objects of dread. The ordinary poor-house provision is calculated rather to secure them from mischief, than to administer to their comfort. I hope that you will not be regardless of this call upon public duty and charity, and that some provision will be promptly made for their relief. I am informed that this matter has engaged the attention of a neighboring state, and that suitable provisions are there in progress.

The poor-house system, so happily devised, and now in successful operation in most of the counties in the state, deserves your attention to its progressive improvement. The poor under that system are generally better provided for, and at much less expense than formerly. The report to be made by the secretary of state, will afford you such minute knowledge of the subject, as will enable you to act understandingly in correcting its defects, and enlarging the sphere of its useful action.

Near the end of the month of June last, the superintendent of the salt works at Salina, had reason to suspect that frauds upon the revenue were practiced in carrying off salt, without paying the duties. He instituted inquiries, and as most of the salt was carried off by water, he examined the books of the canal collector at Salina. They disclosed the fact, that during the then month of June, about twenty-five thousand bushels of salt had been carried away, which were not entered in the books of the superintendent or inspector. He then pursued the same examination back to the ninth day of June, 1828, the time when the collector's office was established at that place. It resulted in a discovery, that during the months of May and June, 1830, thirty-three thousand bushels, during the year 1829 ninety-seven thousand bushels, and in 1828 from the month of June thirty thousand bushels of salt had been carried off by water, without paying the duties. The amount taken away by land could not be ascertained, but it is supposed to be at least fifteen thousand bushels more, making in the whole one hundred and seventy-five thousand bushels; being a fraud upon the revenue to the amount of more than twenty-one thousand dollars. How long previous to the establishment of the collector's office, the practice of smuggling salt had been carried on, or to what extent, it is now impossible to ascertain.—Independently of the loss to the revenue, the practice has materially prejudiced the honest dealer. It has been ascertained that these frauds were accomplished, by means of a combination between certain deputy inspectors, and dealers. Prosecutions are now pending against the transgressors.

The attention of the legislature to this subject is necessary for the purpose of taking measures to prevent the recurrence of similar evils. Laws imposing criminal punishments upon future guilty officers and dealers, ought to be passed, and the canal collectors at Salina, Syracuse, Montezuma and Oswego, may be made instrumental, by imposing certain duties upon them, in preventing such frauds in future. Notwithstanding the depredations upon the revenue, the salt inspected during the year 1830, exceeds that of the year 1829, by about one hundred and forty-three thousand six hundred bushels.

There is another subject connected with our interesting establishment for manufacturing salt at Salina, to which I am desirous of directing your attention. A large capital has been invested, and a great many persons are employed in the production of both coarse and fine salt. Coarse salt, weighing seventy-six pounds, and of a purity equal to any in the world, is sold at a price, which yields the manufacturer nine cents per statute bushel of fifty-six pounds, and fine salt is sold at six cents. Under the heavy state duties, both directly upon the article, and indirectly through canal tolls upon that transported to a distance, the dealers have pushed it into competition with the foreign article east, upon the Hudson river and northern canal, and west as far down the Ohio river, as Wheeling.

The law passed at the last session of congress reduced the duty upon foreign salt five cents, on the first day of the present month, and will reduce it five cents more on the first day of January next; making a reduction in the whole of ten cents, being one cent more than the value of coarse salt, at the manufactory. It is evident that the effect of this reduction will be to circumscribe our salt trade, and ruin many of those engaged in its production. It has been supposed, that the constitution, securing the duties without diminution to the canal fund, presents an insuperable obstacle to relief. Yet a remedy by bounty or otherwise may be found, and the subject is of sufficient importance, both as it regards the persons concerned in the manufacture of a commodity of indispensable necessity, and as it concerns our revenue, to engage your earnest attention.

I have received an interesting report from the President of the Hudson and Delaware canal, which I consider of sufficient importance to transmit to you herewith.

The State has an interest in the success of this canal, on account of the large loan, which it has made in aid of its operations. The report shows, that the company is likely to fulfil, not only its obligations, but also the expectations which it had created. This work is also interesting on account of its opening a new channel of trade, and introducing through it to our markets an important article of necessary consumption.

Among the multifarious concerns of our State which will press themselves upon your notice, the great interests of agriculture, manufactures and commerce cannot fail to be kept constantly in view. While all your measures of general policy, will have a bearing upon these primary interests, it will become you specially to consider how far you can, by measures directly bearing upon them, aid in multiplying their objects and resources, and thereby increase the wealth, happiness and prosperity of the State.

In pursuance of a resolution of the Legislature, during the last session, I issued instructions to the Commissary-General to open a negociation with the general government, for the settlement of the unliquidated ordnance account. He commenced a correspondence with the subordinate officers, who have heretofore been charged with that matter, which produced no result, for want of proper authority on their part. He afterwards brought the subject directly to the notice of the Secretary at War, who has recently empowered an agent to attend to it, and it is hoped that a favorable result will be produced, without incurring the expense of an attendance at the seat of government.

I transmit herewith a report from the Attorney-General relative to the suits, on the claim of John Jacob Astor, and our controversy with New-Jersey.

In the month of February last I concluded a treaty with the Orchard party of the Oneida Indians, by which they ceded to this State one thousand acres of their land. During the last summer the Agent of the State accompanied about one hundred and twenty of this party, and about one hundred of the first Christian party of Oneida Indians to their lands near Green Bay. I have received from the highest sources, information that the Oneida Indians who have removed to that place, are very much improved in their condition. They evince an industry, providence and sobriety, which have stamped a new character upon them.

The act for the employment of Special Counsel, to prosecute the abductors of William Morgan, will expire by its own limitation, on the first day of May next, and it will be your duty to determine upon the propriety of its further continuance. It is much to be regretted, that the ample provisions, heretofore made by special statutes, to punish the actors in this conspiracy, have not produced results as favorable to the cause of vindicatory justice, as all well wishers to good order have desired. Money has been placed at the discretionary disposal of the officer intrusted with the prosecutions, and has been liberally expended by him. No item which he has certified to be necessary, has been rejected by the accounting officer, and no justifiable aid, within the constitutional power of the Executive, during my administration, has been withheld. It is but justice to myself to say, that in all cases where the Executive arm was necessary to reach fugitives, who had taken shelter from the ordinary process of our courts within the jurisdiction of other states, it has been stretched out for that purpose: and that where, from accidental causes, courts were like to fail for want of presiding officers, my exertions have always been unremitted and uniformly successful to sustain them. The statute of limitations closed upon the misdemeanors growing out of this outrage, in September 1829. The judge of the Eighth Circuit informed me, that he should resign at a certain period, whereby the opportunity to present indictments in the counties of Niagara and Monroe, before they should be barred, would be lost. I commenced an active correspondence with the judges of the supreme court, and judges of the other circuits, who were then busied in holding courts within their respective districts, and finally made arrangements, by means of which courts in both those counties were held in season, and a sufficient time, to enable the public prosecutor to present all the indictments which he was prepared to sustain.

The great number of indictments pending in the county of Niagara, was supposed to present a good reason for the appointment of a special circuit court, in the hope, among other considerations, that all the prosecutions might be disposed of, so as to quiet the public mind, and put a stop to the large annual expenses incurred by unnecessary procrastination. A law was accordingly passed, at the last session, directing a court to be held by one of the justices of the supreme court, on the first Monday of June last, a period sufficiently distant from the time of passing the act, to enable the special counsel, then familiarly acquainted with the subject, and in the possession of all the information, and of a knowledge of all the witnesses, to prepare the causes for trial. I was surprised by receiving in the month of May the resignation of the special counsel; an incident of which I had no previous intimation. I corresponded immediately with counsel, by me thought qualified to discharge those important duties upon an emergency, and succeeded, eventually, in inducing

Mr. Birdseye, of Onondaga, a gentleman of respectable talents, and long experience in criminal prosecutions, to accept the trust. In the mean time, I directed the late special counsel to deliver over to the district attorney of Niagara county, all the papers and information in his possession, and requested the district attorney to proceed in preparing the causes for the court. Deeming it my duty to omit no proper measures for the vigorous prosecution of the trials, I also employed Bowen Whiting, esquire, the district attorney of the county of Ontario, who had been the prosecutor of the conspirators in the latter county, to aid Mr. Birdseye in the prosecution, and promised to recommend him to the Legislature for a suitable compensation. As no provision has been made, by law, for the employment of additional counsel, and the exigency arising from the then recent resignation of the special counsel, and which could not have been anticipated by the Legislature, made such aid, in my opinion necessary, I do therefore recommend, that provision be made to compensate Mr. Whiting for his services. The report of Mr. Birdseye is transmitted herewith.

I am conscious that I shall meet with a response in your feelings, while I commend to your friendly aid, those surviving officers and privates of the revolutionary war, who have not yet partaken of the bounty, or shared in the justice of the government. I allude to those who engaged in the struggle for independence, at an early stage of the war, stimulated by an ardent patriotism, without any promise of reward, and have therefore not yet been deemed proper objects of remuneration. Their services are certainly not the less meritorious, because they were disinterested. Many of them have lingered to this day with disease and penury, in consequence of their early sacrifices in the common cause. I trust that you will add your earnest expressions to the efforts which will be made by others, to procure from the National Government, a suitable provision for their old age, out of our now exuberant treasury.

Highly favored as we are by climate, and an exemption from those direful diseases and terrific convulsions of nature which shorten life, or render its continuance wretched, in otherwise genial climates and fruitful regions, we are no less so by soil and mineral treasures, which yield generous returns to the hand of labor. Our wilderness, penetrated by the hardy and enterprising adventurer, and in latter times intersected by channels of intercourse, accomplished by the resources and wise policy of an enlightened government, has given place to highly cultivated fields and blooming gardens, manufacturing towns, villages and cities. But a few years have elapsed, since we were dependent upon foreign skill and industry for nearly all of our fabricated necessities; but now, the manufacturer has almost imperceptibly set himself down by the side of the agriculturist, and we are beginning to be able to supply ourselves with all the wrought articles indispensable to our comfort, from the American workshops.

While our population is rapidly increasing in the country, and wealth diffusing itself in a manner which shows the even bearing of our political institutions upon individual rights, our great commercial city, which connects our interests by its trade with foreign countries, exhibits a population augmented in a ratio beyond all former example. An increasing attention is paid by enlightened and humane individuals, to the intellectual and moral improvement of the rising generation. And above all, we enjoy a freedom of action and of conscience in every thing which is the birthright of man, so far as it is compatible with the salutary restraints of government.

Let it not, then, be said of us, that where wealth and freedom reign, contentment fails; but let us turn our eyes and thankful hearts to the benevolent Author of all good, and beseech him to guide, by his infinite wisdom, our counsels, so that we may continue in his favor, and in the enjoyment of all our blessings.

DOCUMENTS ACCOMPANYING THE PRECEDING MESSAGE.

[No. I.]

Albany, December 27, 1830.

SIR—

In a former communication to your Excellency, (Legislative Documents of 1830, No. IV.) I mentioned the commencement of a suit by the state of New-Jersey, against the people of this state, relative to the question of disputed boundary between the parties. The Supreme Court of the United States, at its last term, decided that the process previously issued in the suit, had not been duly served; and, without disposing of the question of jurisdiction, awarded further process. This has subsequently been served upon the Governor and Attorney-General, and is returnable on the first day of the next January term of that court. It is probable that the counsel for New-Jersey will then move for some order or decree in the cause, which will make it necessary for the court to decide whether it can exercise original and compulsory jurisdiction over a state. Upon this question, I have seen no cause to change the opinion expressed in my former communication.

I am, with great respect,

Your Excellency's

Ob't. humble servant,

GREENE C. BRONSON,

Attorney-General.

His Excellency, Governor THROOP.

[No. II.]

Albany, December 29, 1830.

SIR—

Since the adjournment of the Legislature, two of the suits brought upon the claim of John Jacob Astor, and others, to certain lands in the counties of Putnam and Dutchess, have been tried, and judgments have been rendered therein in favor of the plaintiff.—Bills of exceptions were prepared for the purpose of reviewing those judgments in the Supreme Court of the United States, pursuant to the acts of the legislature of the years 1827 and 1828, upon that subject.

I had hoped that nothing would prevent a decision of the causes, at the next January term of the appellate court; but a difficulty that has arisen about the settlement of the cases, has rendered such a result impracticable, without the abandonment on the part of the defence, of what I consider important and legal rights.

Upon each of the trials, a very able charge was delivered to the jury: the substance of which was inserted in the bills of exceptions, because the counsel for the defence believed it objectionable in point of law. The counsel for the plaintiff proposed to strike out this part of the case, and the whole was struck out on the settlement of the bills by the court. Upon learning this result, I lost no time in asking the Circuit Court to reconsider its determination, and respectfully insisted on the insertion of the charges as matter of legal right. But the court adhered to its first determination, and the bills as settled, do not even mention that a charge was delivered to the jury.

Although I was very desirous to terminate this litigation as soon as possible, and in any event to avoid any complaint of delay from the opposite party, I could not without a dereliction of duty, proceed to bring writs of error, until a further effort had been made to correct the bills of exceptions. I have therefore declined engrossing the bills to be signed; and shall (if not otherwise instructed) take the proper measures to bring the subject before the Supreme Court of the United States, at its next term, by way of a motion for a mandamus to the Circuit Court; and whatever may be the result of this proceeding, I shall then have done all that the forms of law either authorise or require, for obtaining a proper settlement of the cases.

I am, with great respect,

Your Excellency's

Ob't. humble servant,

GREENE C. BRONSON,

Attorney-General.

His Excellency, Governor THROOP.

[No. III.]

To his Excellency ENOS T. THROOP, Acting Governor of the State of New-York :

SIR—

It is my duty to report to you the progress I have made in the discharge of the duties of Special Counsel for conducting the prosecutions against those alleged to be concerned in the outrages committed on William Morgan.

The very late period at which I received your letter intimating your wish to devolve this business on me, left me but a few days to arrange my business, so that I could leave it and travel post haste to the place assigned for holding the special circuit designed for the trial of a part of these causes.

Not having been previously initiated into the peculiar questions which these causes involved, and a stranger to the witnesses, their habits, character and inclinations towards the prosecutions; and finding on my arrival there, many of the material witnesses absent, I was necessarily tardy in the commencement and progress of the causes.

I found there four indictments to be tried; and tried two of them. One against Brown and Wright, who were both acquitted; and one against Ezekiel Jewit and another. Jewit alone was tried and acquitted. The other defendant in that indictment was represented to the court by his counsel to be so sick, that his life was despaired of. His counsel opposed his trial then on that ground. Under that suggestion I moved the separate trial of Jewit the co-defendant.

The time consumed in preparing for these trials and getting through with them, and the incidents occurring on the trials, imposed, as I thought, a duty upon me to move an adjournment of the court.

As to one indictment against several yet untried, a very material witness in behalf of the prosecution was found to be so situated that he refused to testify, and under the decision of the court in the case of Mather, I thought the objection well taken. This witness had been included in that indictment as one of the defendants, and the supreme court, on the motion of my predecessor, had ordered a nolle prosequi as to him on the indictment. This course had been taken with a view to use him as a witness. He was called upon the stand to testify in one of the causes tried, and refused to testify on the ground that there was still another indictment pending against him for the same matter. This was probably unknown or not adverted to by my predecessor. It was unknown to me until the fact came out on the trial. That indictment was pending in the oyer and terminer of Niagara county. But at the time the fact came to my knowledge, the court of oyer and terminer (in session in connection with the special circuit) had been adjourned without day, the judges being impatient to be dismissed, and no business occurring to me as likely to need their attendance.

Under those circumstances, a necessity seemed to be imposed upon me to have the special circuit adjourned to some day beyond the then next oyer and terminer for the county of Niagara, so that at such court a nolle prosequi might be had on the old indictment. That next court being the sixteenth of November, it was adjourned over to the second Monday of January; a nolle prosequi has been had upon the former indictment, and the objection is now removed.

The course taken by some of the witnesses at the Lockport circuit, and the satisfactory evidence that we had, that other material and important witnesses had either voluntarily absented themselves, or been persuaded to abscond, were additional considerations, as I thought, why it was not my duty to put any more on trial then, for the mere purpose of a formal acquittal.

The course of witnesses alluded to, was that of one who refused to answer questions decided by the court to be proper and pertinent, and that of two others who refused to be sworn at all. These were promptly punished by the court for the contempts. Another absconded during the trial in which his testimony was wanted. How far the contumacious witnesses were influenced to the course they took, by the persuasions or advice of interested friends, I have no means of knowing, but presume that the ascertained legal consequences of such conduct, or the manner in which public opinion has relished it, will prevent a repetition of such acts of defiance against the authority of the government.

At the recent trial of Gillis, Whitney, one of the witnesses who refused at Lockport to be sworn, altered his course and testified. Had he testified at Lockport to what he has since, and had Bruce testified there to what he had before, I believe the only possible point of uncertainty with the jury in the case of Brown and Wright, (that of Morgan's being in the carriage with which they had to do,) would have been dispelled. As to Turner, who refused on the trial of Ezekiel Jewet, to testify to the facts believed to be within his knowledge, we have not the same certain means of knowing that his testimony should have convicted the defendant.

As to the witness Giddings who absconded during the trial of Jewit, his course was equally a surprize upon the prosecution. It is known that he had once before been presented before a court in Ontario county and there rejected for the want of the supposed requisite religious belief.

Soon after my arrival at Lockport, I was addressed by the defendant's counsel to know if I should examine him. I took time to ascertain all the facts so as to answer understandingly, but reciprocating the freedom which dictated the inquiry, I asked the defendant's counsel to say to me whether, if he were examined, any attack would be made upon his character for truth and veracity. I received for answer that his character in that respect would not be attacked, for they knew it could not be. Having made deliberate examination as to the extent of the testimony in the power of the prosecution to produce, to sustain him on the matter of fact ruled against him in Ontario; and also having formed a most deliberate conviction that that decision was erroneous in point of law, and after the assurance of the defendant's counsel as to his character for truth and veracity, which I found confirmed on inquiry, I felt bound to say that I should examine him if permitted. Any remarks upon the reasons for his departure, would be improperly introduced here, as he has yet to answer for that.

One other incident disclosed upon the Lockport trials, seems to be of such a nature as to deserve to be brought officially to the notice of your Excellency. One witness persisted in swearing impliedly to the murder of Morgan, in order to protect himself from answering the questions put to him; swearing, as the reason for such refusal, that he might thereby implicate himself as an accessory before the fact in the murder of William Morgan; and persisted in the answers after being cautioned by the Judge that he would perjure himself with answers, unless Morgan was in fact murdered, and unless he had satisfactory knowledge or information of the fact, or at least something more than mere hearsay or public rumor; and that if the laws of man did not punish him, the laws of God would.

Mature reflection on this incident, as well as the general history of these prosecutions, where we have found so many stratagems resorted to, to frustrate inquiry, has induced me to venture the suggestion, whether the constitutional guarantee that no man in a criminal case should be compelled to be a witness against himself, ought not to be placed by a general statute upon a different footing than that of a judicial immunity from testifying, on the ground that such testimony may be subsequently used for the conviction of the witness. Ought not the witness to be compelled to testify; and would not his security from any ill effects of such disclosure be sufficient, if that testimony were inadmissible in any criminal case against himself? That is a principle already recognized in our statute book, and I see no reason why it should not be made general. (See 2d Revised Laws, 174, sec. 42.) If this security be not thought adequate in cases of high crimes, then permit the government, under the special direction of the chief magistrate, in all such cases, to use the same means to compel an associate to testify as any other witness, and make the giving of such testimony a bar to all prosecutions against the witness for any participation in the alleged offence: I say, provide by a general statute, for I would not suggest for these cases a special law.

It would seem that such general statute would be preferable to any common law practice of favoritism, or the practice of giving rewards to witnesses to testify; a practice occasionally resorted to by most governments, but not congenial to the feelings of our people.

The great duty of the government to protect its citizens, administer justice impartially and punish the guilty, would seem to impose on it the duty of adapting its laws to the improved ingenuity of those who break the law.

At the November general sessions in Ontario county, James Gillis was tried. This was the only indictment remaining untried in that county. This defendant had been before once tried, and the jury discharged because they could not agree. The testimony against him on this trial was wholly circumstantial, and seems not to have been so conclusive in the minds of the jury who tried him, as to warrant his conviction. This defendant and his brother moved to the southwestern part of Pennsylvania soon after Morgan's abduction, and took with them an apprentice of the brother, who is now reported to me to remain there in the employ of the defendant. If his evidence, as given before the grand jury on the finding of this indictment, be correctly reported to me, the strength of this case was materially impaired by our inability to command his testimony. But he was beyond our reach.

There are two indictments depending in Monroe, one of which is suspended by some special pleading, the question on which was submitted to the Supreme Court at the last May term, and is yet under advisement before that tribunal. Should they decide it at the approaching January term, as I understand they will; and should they so decide it that a trial will be required in the cause, these two causes may be tried at the next circuit in that county, if a judge can be procured to attend. Judge Gardiner declines to try any more of these causes, as I understand.

The reason for not attempting to try the one cause without the other, were in part the great oppression upon the witnesses, and the expense of assembling them for one of these trials, when there was a reasonable probability that, by waiting for the decision of the Supreme Court, we might get a chance to try both at the same circuit; a coincidence very much to be desired, if we shall have to procure a distant judge.

One other indictment is depending in Genesee county. This has been removed by certiorari to the Supreme Court, to which a special plea has been interposed. The issue is not joined, owing to circumstances beyond my control.

The adjourned Special Circuit, which had been fixed for the second Monday of January, as being as early a day as other considerations would permit after the regular oyer and terminer in that county, in consequence of the resolution of Judge Gardiner to try no more of these causes, it has been found necessary to get further adjourned. It is expected that Judge Gardiner will attend on the second Monday of January, therefore, and adjourn the court to the second Monday of February; when it is hoped that a judge of the Supreme Court may be able to attend, without interfering with the approaching term of that court.

The above detail as well of what has been done as of what remains to be done, I have thought proper to present, that your Excellency might be accurately informed of the present state of this business.

In the discharge of the duties devolved on me by this appointment, I have received the most essential assistance from Mr. Whiting, whom your Excellency was pleased to request to act as my associate counsel on these trials. His previous acquaintance with the facts and questions arising in these causes, as well as his local and personal information of the whole subject, added to his talents and experience as a lawyer, made his aid most welcome. Indeed, the formidable array of able and experienced counsel in all these causes, with a disposition to contest every inch of ground, would seem too formidable for me to encounter alone.

Having, in the several interviews I have had with your Excellency on the subject of these cases, been constantly impressed with your unceasing anxiety to bring all the guilty to speedy and exemplary punishment, I regret that I have as yet been so unfortunate in carrying your wishes into effect.

Very respectfully, I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

VICTORY BIRDSEYE,

Special Counsel.

To His Excellency ENOS T. THROOP,
Acting Governor of the State of New-York.

Office of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company.Bolton, December 11, 1830.

SIR—

The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company consider it their duty to communicate to the Executive of the state of New-York, the progress they have made in the great objects for which they were incorporated.

This would seem but proper, were they to rest their claim on the attention of the executive, solely on the ground that they had succeeded in introducing through the interior of the state of New-York, the anthracite coal of Pennsylvania, of a very superior quality. But it would seem to be more especially their duty, when the legislature have at different periods, extended their aid to the company, in accomplishing the work in which they have been engaged, to advise the government of its progress and utility.

The managers feel a just pride in the reflection, that they have faithfully fulfilled the objects of the incorporation, and that so far, the predictions of the interested and incredulous have been compelled to yield to the force of facts and the stubborn reality of the completion and successful operation of their work.

Your excellency will readily appreciate the difficulties which had to be encountered by a private company, in constructing a canal of 108 miles in length, through a country, which to common observers, seemed impracticable for a work of this description, and a rail-road of 16 miles, overcoming an ascent of 855 feet, in a country thinly inhabited. The latter is the first of its kind in this country, requiring all the combinations for ascending and descending planes, with engines worked by steam and gravity, and shows how readily skill combined with capital can overcome the most formidable obstacles.

Towards the close of 1829, I had the honor to communicate to you, that upwards of 7,000 tons of coal had been brought to the Hudson, and disposed of chiefly at 8 dollars per ton, at the same time it was intimated that the price would be reduced the ensuing season. What the price should be, became an important consideration with the Board, between the close and resumption of active operations. Our want of considerable means for enlarged operations, our duty to the stockholders and to the public, had each a due share in the deliberations of the Board. In our second application to the legislature for aid, we assumed 6 dollars per ton of 2,240 lbs. as the price at which we could afford to sell at tide water. Our brief experience of the past season, although under many disadvantages, sufficed to test our estimates, and the price was accordingly fixed at 6 dollars per ton, at which it has been sold throughout the season. We are now encouraged to hope that with still more enlarged operations, we shall be enabled to realize, in respect to price, the expectations of the public, so far as they are founded on our representations. As a measure of economy, time was taken last spring to put the canal in the best possible condition, which deferred the opening until the 27th April; and the very slight interruptions which have occurred in the navigation, proves the good judgment of our chief engineer, Mr. Jarvis, in thus deferring the opening of the canal. It has now become a solid, substantial work, and the exposed points on the Delaware and Lackawaxen have been well secured. They have been recently subjected to a severe test, a heavy fall of snow was succeeded by several days of incessant rain. The Delaware and Lackawaxen rose with great rapidity. The former, at our crossing place, 12 feet in 24 hours; the only injury sustained, was on the Lackawaxen, by the water passing through the slope wall, and washing some of the bank into the canal, which was repaired at an expense of 15 dollars. This detail is given in consequence of doubts having been expressed of the stability of this part of our work, in an official report to the legislature in 1829.

Our rail-road has fully met our expectations, since the substitution of ropes for chains on the inclined planes. This change, however, which was effected at the close of winter, was very expensive. The quality of the coal in the river flat disappointed us. It had been too long exposed to the action of the elements, and its use last season gave consumers an unfavorable impression. We were on this account compelled by a year earlier than was intended, to commence drifts on both sides of the valley, and at the same time to get out the coal for market this year. To have performed this work with the greatest advantage, the making of drifts should have preceded the mining. This will be done during the suspension of navigation, and will enable us to enlarge our operations the ensuing season. Notwithstanding this difficulty in our mining operations, we have brought to market this year 41,500 tons of coal, all of first quality, except about 1,500 tons of surface coal brought over the rail-road last winter, and the boats yet to arrive will increase the whole quantity to 43,400 tons.

The quality of this coal is so superior and has proved so satisfactory to consumers, that it has entirely redeemed its character, where it had been impaired by reason of the mixture of inferior or surface coal among that which was brought to market in 1829.

We beg leave respectfully to represent to your Excellency that the benefits of our work to the citizens of this state, are no longer a matter of speculation. It is conceded that the price of fuel has been reduced beyond the most sanguine expectations, in this our first season, of tolerably successful operation. Last season, in the city of New-York, foreign bituminous coal was at 12½ dollars per chaldron; anthracite 11 and 11½ dollars per ton. Foreign was recently sold at $6.50, about a dollar lower than the average per chaldron. Virginia coal is about 25 per cent. less than last year, and the dealers retail ours at $7.50, including cartage, leaving $6.75 as the price of the coal at the yards per ton of 2,240lb. The reduction in the price of wood commenced with the first season of our navigation between the Delaware and the Hudson in 1828, since which wood has been lower than it had been in 20 years previous.

There was a time, and that only a few years past, when reflecting men anticipated a check to the growth of the city of New-York and its continued prosperity from the high price of fuel, and within three years the humanity and benevolence of the citizens were taxed to the amount of 15 or 20 thousand dollars to supply the suffering poor with fuel ; this cannot occur again. In the abundant stock of coal in market, and our ability to meet the increasing consumption, the citizen is relieved from the necessity of laying in his whole stock of fuel for the winter at one time to guard against excessive prices, should the winter be long and severe ; and the benevolent heart is freed from all anxiety in respect to the sufferings of the poor from this cause. We confidently trust that in the opinion of all unprejudiced minds, we have redeemed our pledge to the state, in furnishing a superior coal at a price much less than it had ever sold for. We have had to contend with a vigorous competition from companies and individuals engaged in the same business, which has been surmounted ; and we confidently predict that, with the fostering care of the state, the loans she has so generously aided us in procuring, will in due time be paid without any defalcation.

I have the honor to be,
 Very respectfully,

such officer may take a recognizance, with or without surety, at his discretion, from the defendant, for his appearance at the adjourned hearing.

§ 8. The officer conducting such inquiry shall have the same authority to issue subpoenas for witnesses which is now conferred by law on any officer empowered to hear applications of insolvents, for the purpose of exonerating their persons from imprisonment, and shall have the same power to enforce obedience to such subpoenas, and to punish witnesses refusing to testify; and witnesses wilfully disobeying any such subpoena shall be liable to the penalties prescribed in the seventh article of title first and chapter fifth of the second part of the Revised Statutes.

§ 9. If such officer is satisfied that the allegations of the complainant are substantiated, and that the defendant has done, or is about to do, any one of the acts specified in the fourth section of this act, he shall, by a commitment under his hand, direct that such defendant be committed to the jail of the county in which such hearing shall be had, to be there detained until he shall be discharged according to law; and such defendant shall be committed and detained accordingly.

§ 10. Such commitment shall not be granted, if the defendant shall either

1. Pay the debt or demand claimed, with the costs of the suit and of the proceedings against him: or,

2. Give security, to the satisfaction of the officer before whom the hearing shall be had, that the debt or demand of the plaintiff, with the costs of the suit and proceedings aforesaid, shall be paid within sixty days, with interest: or,

3. Make and deliver to such officer an inventory of his estate and an account of his creditors, and execute an assignment of his property as hereinafter provided, on which the same proceedings shall be had as upon a petition of such defendant in the manner hereinafter directed, except that no notice to the plaintiff shall be requisite; and no adjournment shall be granted for more than three days, except at the instance of the defendant; and a discharge shall be granted in the like case, and with the same effect: or,

4. Enter into a bond to the complainant, in a penalty not less than twice the amount of the debt or demand claimed, with such sureties as shall be approved by such officer, conditioned that such defendant will, within thirty days, apply for an assignment of all his property and for a discharge, as provided in the subsequent sections of this act, and diligently prosecute the same until he obtains such discharge: or,

5. If such defendant wishes to contest the plaintiff's demand, and shall give a bond to such plaintiff, in the penalty and with the sureties above prescribed, conditioned that he will not remove any property which he then has out of the jurisdiction of the court in which such suit is brought, with the intent to defraud any of his creditors, and that he will not assign or dispose of any such property with such intent, or with a view to give a preference to any creditor for any debt antecedent to such assignment or disposition, until the demand of the plaintiff, with the costs, shall be satisfied, or until the expiration of three months after a final judgment shall be rendered in the suit brought for the recovery of such demand.

§ 11. Any defendant committed as above provided, shall remain in custody in the same manner as other prisoners on criminal process, until a final judgment shall have been rendered in his favor in the suit prosecuted by the creditor at whose instance such defendant shall have been committed, or until he shall have assigned his property and obtained his discharge, as provided in the subsequent sections of this act; but such defendant may be discharged by the officer committing him, or any other person authorised to discharge the duties of such officer, on such defendant paying the debt or demand claimed, or giving security for the payment thereof, as provided in the tenth section of this act, or on his executing either of the bonds mentioned in the said section.

§ 12. Any person committed as above provided, or who shall have given the bond specified in the fourth subdivision of the tenth section of this act, or against whom any suit shall have been commenced in a court of record, in which such person, by the provisions of this act, cannot be arrested or imprisoned, may present a petition to a justice of the supreme court, a circuit judge, any judge of a county court, or any supreme court commissioner in the county in which such defendant resides or is imprisoned, praying that his property may be assigned, and that he may have the benefit of the provisions of this act.

§ 13. On presenting such petition, such defendant shall deliver an account of his creditors and an inventory of his estate, similar in all respects to the account and inventory required of a debtor by the sixth article of title first and chapter five of the second part of the Revised Statutes, and shall annex to the said petition, account and inventory an affidavit, which shall be taken and subscribed by him before the officer to whom such petition is presented, similar in all respects to the oath required by the fifth section of the sixth article of the aforesaid title and chapter.

§ 14. Fourteen days' previous notice of the time and place at which, and of the officer to whom such petition will be presented, together with a copy of such petition and the account and inventory thereto annexed, shall be served personally on the plaintiffs by whom such defendant shall be prosecuted, their personal representatives or their attorney; and proof of such service shall be made at the time of presenting such petition.

§ 15. Any creditor of such petitioner may oppose such application, and may examine the petitioner, his wife, or any other witness, in the manner prescribed in the third article of the aforesaid first title and fifth chapter, and shall be entitled to the like process to compel their attendance and testimony, and such witnesses shall in all respects be subject to the provisions of the seventh article of the said title for their neglect to obey subpoenas or to testify.

§ 16. Upon sufficient cause shown by the petitioner or by any creditor, the officer to whom such petition is addressed may adjourn the hearing thereof, not exceeding thirty days; and if at any hearing of such petition, the opposing creditor shall fail to satisfy such officer that the proceedings on the part of the petitioner are not just and fair, or that he has concealed, removed or disposed of any of his property, with intent to defraud his creditors, such officer shall order an assignment of all the property of such petitioner, in the same manner as provided in the third article of the first title of the fifth chapter of the second part of the Revised Statutes, which assignment shall be executed with the like effect as declared in the said article, and shall be recorded in the same manner.

§ 17. Such officer shall appoint one or more assignees, to whom such petitioner shall assign all his estate; and upon producing to such officer evidence that such assignment has been recorded, and a certificate of the assignees that all the property of such petitioner, specified in his inventory, has been delivered to them, or that he has given satisfactory security for the future delivery of the same, such officer shall grant to the petitioner a discharge, which shall exonerate him from being proceeded against by any creditor entitled to a dividend of the estate of such petitioner, as herein after provided, under the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth sections of this act, for any fraud committed or intended before such discharge.

§ 18. The assignees to whom such assignment shall be made, shall be vested with all the rights and powers over the property so assigned, which are specified in the eighth article of the first title of chapter five of the second part of the Revised Statutes, and shall be subject to the same duties, obligations and control in all respects, and shall make dividends, and vacancies in their number shall be supplied as therein directed.

§ 19. The general provisions applicable to proceedings under the several articles of the said first title, and which are contained in the seventh article of the said title, shall be deemed to apply to the proceedings herein directed, so far as the same are not inconsistent with the provisions of this act; and the officers and assignees performing any duties under this act, shall be entitled for their services to the same fees and compensation as are provided by law for similar services under the fifth article of the aforesaid first title of chapter five, and as are provided by law for services in criminal cases.

§ 20. Every person imprisoned on civil process at the time of this act taking effect as a law, in any case where, by the preceding provisions of this act, such person could not be arrested or imprisoned, shall be entitled to be discharged at the expiration of three months after this act shall take effect as a law, unless the creditor at whose suit such person shall be imprisoned, shall, within the time aforesaid, make application and complaint to some judge of the court in which such suit was brought, or to some officer authorised to perform the duties of such judge, as specified in the third and fourth sections of this act; and upon such application being made, if a warrant is not issued as herein provided, such imprisoned person shall be entitled to be discharged from imprisonment; and if such warrant be granted, the same proceedings shall be had thereon as herein before provided; and the removal of the defendant from any jail in which he may be imprisoned by any warrant in such proceedings, shall not be deemed an escape.

§ 21. Every person imprisoned, as in the last preceding section specified, may give a notice to the creditors at whose suit he is imprisoned, and present a petition and inventory, as specified in the twelfth and thirteenth sections of this act; and the same proceedings shall be had thereon as herein before provided, and a discharge granted on such petition as therein directed, shall entitle such petitioner to be discharged from his imprisonment.

§ 22. Whenever any complaint shall be made under the third, fourth and fifth sections of this act, and the same shall be dismissed, the party making the same shall be liable for all fees to officers, and for all costs and expenses which the defendant shall have incurred.

§ 23. Whenever, in this act, the removal, concealment or disposal of any property is declared to be the ground of any complaint or proceeding, and where any bond is required in reference to such concealment, removal or disposal, the same shall not be deemed to apply to any property which shall be expressly exempted by statute from levy and sale under execution.

§ 24. Whenever a bond, given under the tenth section of this act, shall become forfeited by the non-performance of the condition thereof, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover thereon the amount due to him on the judgment obtained in the original suit instituted against the defendant giving such bond.

§ 25. The foregoing provisions of this act shall not extend to suits or proceedings before justices or other courts, for the recovery of any debt or demand of fifty dollars or less.

§ 26. Any person who shall remove any of his property out of any county, with intent to prevent the same from being levied upon by any execution, or who shall secrete, assign, convey, or otherwise dispose of any of his property, with intent to defraud any creditor, or to prevent such property being made liable for the payment of his debts, shall, on conviction, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and where the property so removed, secreted, concealed, assigned, conveyed, or otherwise disposed of, shall be worth fifty dollars or less, such offence may be tried by a court of special sessions of the peace, in the manner directed in the third title of chapter second of the fourth part of the Revised Statutes; and in such case, the punishment for such offence shall be limited, as prescribed in the said title.

§ 27. Whenever any person shall have been convicted of a misdemeanor under the last preceding section of this act, the same proceedings may be had for the appointment of trustees to take charge of the estate of such person as are authorised by the second article of the first title of chapter five of the second part of the Revised Statutes; and the trustees so appointed shall possess all the powers, rights and authority, be entitled to the same compensation and be subject to the same duties, obligations and control, in all respects, as trustees appointed under the said second article: and in addition thereto, if such trustees suspect that the person so convicted has concealed about his person or otherwise, money or evidences of debt, upon making oath of the same before any judge of a county court, and on such judge being satisfied that such suspicions are well founded, he may issue a warrant authorising and commanding any sheriff or constable to search the person of such defendant, and any place occupied by him, or any trunk or other article owned or possessed by him, for such money or evidences, and to deliver what shall be so discovered to such trustees.

§ 28. When it shall appear to any officer authorised to entertain any proceedings under this act, that any misdemeanor or perjury has been committed by any party or witness, it shall be his duty to take the measures prescribed by law to cause the offender to appear at the proper court having jurisdiction of the offence, to answer for the same.

§ 29. No execution issued on any judgment rendered by any justice of the peace, upon any demand arising upon contract express or implied, or upon any other judgment founded upon contract, whether issued by such justice or by the clerk of the county, shall contain a clause authorising an arrest or imprisonment of the person against whom the same shall issue, unless it shall be proved, by the affidavit of the person in whose favor such execution shall issue, or that of some other person, to the satisfaction of such clerk or justice: either,

1. That the person against whom the same shall issue had not resided in this state for the space of thirty days immediately preceding the commencement of the suit upon which such judgment was rendered, or immediately preceding the rendition of such judgment, if the same was rendered upon confession without process: or,

2. That such judgment was for the recovery of money collected by any public officer: or,

3. For official misconduct or neglect of duty: or,

4. For damages for misconduct or neglect in any professional employment.

30. No warrant shall issue against a defendant in any case in which by the provisions of the last preceding section, an execution on the judgment recovered could not be issued against his body, and whenever a warrant in such case shall issue, the like affidavit shall be required as for the issuing of an execution by the provisions of said section.

§ 31. Whenever by the provisions of the last preceding section no warrant can issue, and the plaintiff shall be a non-resident of the county, and shall give the like proof of the fact, and tender to the justice the security now required by law to entitle him to a warrant, the justice shall issue a summons, which may be made returnable not less than two nor more than four days from the date thereof, and shall be served at least two days before the time of appearance mentioned therein; and if the same shall be returned personally served the same proceedings shall be had, and no longer adjournment granted than in case of a warrant at the instance of a non-resident plaintiff.

§ 32. Whenever, by the provisions of the thirtieth section of this act, no warrant can issue, and the defendant shall reside out of the county, he shall be proceeded against by summons or attachment, returnable not less than two nor more than four days from the date thereof, which shall be served at least two days before the time of appearance mentioned therein; and if such defendant be proceeded against otherwise, the justice shall have no jurisdiction of the cause.

§ 33. In addition to the cases in which suits may now be commenced before justices of the peace, by attachment, any suit for the recovery of any debt or damages arising upon any contract, express or implied, or upon any judgment for fifty dollars or less, may be so commenced, whenever it shall satisfactorily appear to such justice that the defendant is about to remove from the county any of his property, with intent to defraud his creditors, or has assigned, disposed of, secreted, or is about to assign, dispose of or secrete any of his property, with the like intent, whether such defendant be a resident of this state or not.

§ 34. Before any attachment shall issue in such case, or in the cases provided for in article second, title fourth, chapter second, part third of the Revised Statutes, the plaintiff shall, by his own affidavit, or that of some other person or persons, prove to the satisfaction of the justice, the facts and circumstances to entitle him to the same, and that he has such a claim as is specified in the last preceding section against the defendant, over and above all discounts which the defendant may have against him, specifying, as near as may be, the amount of such claim or the balance thereof; and such plaintiff, or some one in his behalf, shall also execute in the cases provided for by this act, a bond in the penalty of at least one hundred dollars, with such sureties, and upon such condition as is required in section twenty-ninth of said article; and so much of said article as requires any other or different proof for the issuing of an attachment, than that required by this section, is hereby repealed.

§ 35. Every attachment issued by virtue of this act or of the provisions contained in the said second article, shall be served in the manner now provided in said article, except that if the defendant can be found in the county, the copy of such attachment and inventory, shall be served upon him personally, instead of leaving the same at the place now prescribed in said article; and the return of said officer, in addition to what is now required, shall state specifically whether such copy was or was not personally served upon the defendant.

§ 36. If such attachment was issued in one of the cases provided for by this act, and shall be returned personally served upon the defendant, the justice shall, on the return day, proceed to hear and determine the cause, in the same manner as upon a summons returned personally served.

§ 37. If such attachment was issued in one of the cases provided for by this act, and at the return day it shall appear by the return, that property was attached, and that a copy of such inventory and attachment was not personally served, and the defendant shall not appear, the plaintiff may take out a summons against the defendant; and if such summons shall be returned that the defendant cannot be found, after diligent inquiry, or that the same has been personally served upon the defendant, then, in either case, the justice shall proceed to hear and determine the cause in the same manner as upon a summons returned personally served.

§ 38. A judgment obtained before any justice, in any suit commenced by attachment, when the defendant shall not be personally served with the attachment or summons, and shall not appear, shall be only presumptive evidence of indebtedness, in any suit that may be brought thereon, and may be repelled by the defendant; and no execution issued upon such judgment shall be levied upon any other property than such as was seized under the attachment issued thereon; nor shall any defendant in such case be barred of any set-off which he may have against the plaintiff.

§ 39. A defendant against whose body, by the provisions of this act, an execution can not be issued from a justice's court, shall not be required, in order to obtain an adjournment of a cause, to give a bond with the condition now required by law, but instead thereof, the condition of such bond shall be, that no part of his property liable to be taken on execution shall be removed, secreted, assigned, or in any way disposed of, except for the necessary support of himself and family, until the plaintiff's demand shall be satisfied, or until the expiration of ten days after such plaintiff shall be entitled to have an execution issued on the judgment obtained in such cause, if he shall obtain such judgment; and if the condition of such bond be broken, and an execution on such judgment be returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, the plaintiff in an action on such bond shall be entitled to recover the amount due on such judgment.

§ 40. Sections one hundred and thirty-seven, one hundred and thirty-eight and one hundred and thirty-nine of title fourth, chapter second and part third of the Revised Statutes are hereby repealed.

§ 41. When judgment shall be rendered against the defendant, no more than two summons, and the service of two summons, shall be included in the costs of such judgment.

§ 42. All the provisions of said title fourth, not hereby expressly repealed, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby declared to be in full force, and to apply to the provisions of this act, so far as the same relate to proceedings in courts before justices of the peace.

§ 43. All persons imprisoned at the time this act shall take effect as a law, by virtue of any execution issued upon a judgment recovered before any justice upon any contract, express or implied, shall be discharged from such imprisonment, as in the next section provided, unless the plaintiff in such execution shall, on or before that day, file with the jailer an affidavit stating such facts as would authorize an execution against the body of the defendant, according to the twenty-ninth section of this act.

§ 44. To entitle such imprisoned debtor to such discharge, he shall present to the jailer or sheriff in whose custody he shall be, an affidavit setting forth that the execution by virtue of which he is imprisoned, issued upon a judgment obtained on a contract, express or implied, or obtained on a judgment founded on such contract; and thereupon he shall be discharged, and the sheriff shall not be liable to any action for such discharge.

§ 45. Any person imprisoned on any process issued out of any court, who shall be entitled to be discharged from such imprisonment under the provisions of this act, may bring a writ of habeas corpus or certiorari for that purpose, in the manner provided in the ninth chapter of the third part of the Revised Statutes.

§ 46. The provisions of this act, from the twenty-ninth section inclusive, shall apply to executions, warrants and other process issued by the marine court in the city of New-York, by the assistant justices for wards in the said city, and by the justices of the justices' courts of the city of Albany and of the city of Hudson, and to all proceedings in the said courts and by the said justices, in the like cases and in the same manner as herein provided in respect to justices of the peace.

§ 47. This act shall take effect as a law on the first day of September, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one; but the secretary of state shall immediately cause a sufficient number of copies of this act to be printed by the state printer to supply every justice of the peace in the state, and every town clerk and sheriff with a copy, which shall be transmitted by him to the clerks of the different counties, and by them distributed to the officers entitled thereto: the expense of which printing and transmission to the county clerks shall be paid out of the treasury in the manner provided by law.

Mr. Selden offered for the consideration of the House, three several resolutions, in the words following, to wit :

Resolved, That it is impolitic to adopt the system of borrowing money to meet the ordinary expenses of the government ; that it will create a national debt, and largely increase the burthen upon our people in subsequent periods.

Resolved, That the plan of raising money by direct taxation for the purposes of the State government, is calculated to insure economy and fidelity in our public officers, by causing to be distinctly known to the people the amount of the public expenditures.

Resolved, That inasmuch as the general fund of this State has, by its application to the public expenses from year to year, so far diminished, that the collections upon the principal and interest are wholly inadequate to meet our annual expenditures; that it can no longer be relied upon, and that the residue thereof which shall remain at the close of the present year, should be transferred to the common school fund, a fund which will soon prove insufficient to meet the wants of this important department of education, and upon which depends to a great extent the permanency of our republican institutions.

Thereupon,

On motion of Mr. J. C. Spencer,

Mr. Speaker put the question whether the House would proceed to the consideration of the said resolutions, and it was determined in the negative.

TO THE ASSEMBLY.

GENTLEMEN,

I have this day approved and signed the bill entitled "An act to incorporate the Clinton fire insurance company of the city of New-York."

Also the bill entitled "An act to abolish imprisonment for debt, and to punish fraudulent debtors."

E. T. THROOP.

Albany, April 26, 1831.

Ordered, That Mr. Livingston and Mr. Juliand wait upon the Governor, and inform him that unless he has some further business to lay before the Legislature, this House is ready to adjourn.

Ordered, That Mr. Edmonds and Mr. Fillmore be a committee to wait upon the Senate, and inform them that this House is ready to adjourn.

Mr. Livingston reported, that pursuant to the order of the House, Mr. Juliand and himself had waited upon the Governor, and informed him that unless he had some further business to lay before the Legislature, this House was ready to adjourn; and that the Governor had been pleased to say that he had no further communication to make to the Legislature.

Mr. Edmonds reported, that pursuant to the order of the House, Mr. Fillmore and himself had waited upon the Senate, and informed them that this House was ready to adjourn.

On motion of Mr. J. C. Spencer,

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this House be presented to the Hon. George R. Davis, for the assiduity with which he has discharged the laborious duties of the Chair, and for the urbanity and ability with which he has presided over the deliberations of the House during the present session.

To which his Honor the Speaker made the following reply :

GENTLEMEN—

The kind and flattering expression of your approbation of my conduct, as presiding officer of this House, gives me peculiar gratification ; coming as it does from a body distinguished for its talents, intelligence, and its business habits ; and ranking among its number two gentlemen who have heretofore filled this chair, with honor to themselves and credit to the State.

When I accepted the responsible trust to which, by your partiality, I was called, I did it with the confident expectation, that upon your generous forbearance I could at all times rely, for the many errors which, from my inexperience, I could not claim an exemption. In this expectation I have not been disappointed ; for at all times I have received from you the most liberal indulgence, the most uniform kindness, and the most prompt and efficient aid, and for which I tender you my warmest and most grateful acknowledgments.

I should do injustice to my own feelings, were I to omit on this occasion the expression of my acknowledgments for the many obligations I am under to the able and intelligent Clerk of this House, for the aid and assistance he has afforded me in the fulfilment of my arduous duties.

Gentlemen—Associated as we have been in the discharge of a high public trust, intimacies have been contracted and friendships formed, long to be remembered and fondly cherished, and the recollection of which will ever be dear to my heart.

These daily intimacies and official relationships are about to be dissolved, and with them all those endearing courtesies and kindly offices that the discharge of kindred trusts are calculated to produce, and for which this House has been peculiarly distinguished ; and may I not indulge the hope, that nothing has transpired to be remembered in anger or cherished in unkindness ?

The hour of our separation is at hand. This separation to many of us may be until we meet in another and a better world. Whether it will be otherwise, is only known to that Being who holds in his hand the issues of life and of death, and to Him it must be committed.

Gentlemen—May you return to the bosom of your families, and to the society of your constituents, greeted with the approbation of their smiles, and cheered with the reward of their increased confidence ; and may you long live to enjoy the one and to participate liberally of the other ; and with the warmest wishes and the deepest solicitude for your future healths, happiness and honor, permit me to bid you all an affectionate farewell.

A message from the Senate, delivered by Mr. Hubbard and Mr. Maynard, was received, informing that the Senate were ready to adjourn.

Thereupon,

Mr. Speaker adjourned the House sine die.
